Focus on 1965

The Jackson Township School opened its doors for the 1964-1965 school year on September 3, 1964. As the portals of education were flung open, 590 eager students streamed into Jackson Township's educational plant. For some it was the beginning of a memorable and magnificent experience. For others it was nearly the end, but all students fixed their sights on the goal of an education to meet the challenges that lie ahead.

As the year unfolded, we formed our routines, and then tried to devise clever and unique means of varying them. Students took pride in participating in athletics, 4-H, Sunshine Society, Red Cross, Student Council, or other activities offered.

New courses strengthened the curriculum, while the addition of several enthusiastic new teachers to a staff of capable veterans made the educational opportunities at Jackson Township as great as in any school.

Now let us direct our attention to the unfolding pages as we reminisce and focus on 1965.

RHS Students Focus Attention

Ellen Simon relates an amusing incident to Richard Smith and Mr. Everitt before third period study hall begins.

Patty John, Bob Denton, and Rita Edwards model the latest fads which include black, lacey hose, sports cars, and Italian boots.

Students often stretch their legs, sit and rest, or just chat informally as they wait for the bell to sound, beginning another class.

on Variety of Life

Let it never be said that RHS students are lazy. The best time to find them bursting with energy is the second after class is dismissed for lunch. Coming in second place as a "rush time" at Roanoke School is the minute the final bell rings, closing the day's activities.

Students are seen doing numerous things during the school day—besides studying, of course. At noon hour many shed their excess energy in the gymnasium, participating in various games and sports. Others can be seen walking leisurely through the hall talking over the activities of the day and those that will occur in the future. Still others, although few in number, can be found industriously cleaning and polishing their lockers, or finishing an assignment at the last minute.

A break in the daily routine such as assembly programs and pep sessions is always appreciated by the students. These happenings constitute a variety of life at R.H.S.

Adding variety to the students' days are the frequent pep sessions during basketball season.

Autograph-seeking students gather around Mr. Charles King, spiritual singer, after he presented one of the year's finest assembly programs.

Eric Forst and Bonnie Sunderman compare their itineraries from Girls' and Boys' State held at Indiana U. during the past summer.

Phil Cooper reviews some of the skills he learned at Junior Red Cross Leadership Training School at Miami University in Ohio.

The 1965 Focus Is on

The most important role of the school is to provide an adequate education for all. The students here are most fortunate in this respect. Listed on the school's curriculum is a variety of classes which may appeal to the individual. Not only does R.H.S. possess a fine curriculum, but the faculty members who teach these classes are capable instructors.

Striving for quality and perfection, the students try to do their best throughout the school year. Many achieve their goal and are recognized for their accomplishments. Awards for citizenship, scholastics, and sports are received by those who have worked and studied hard as a reward for their perseverance. These students are honored at the close of the school year on Achievement Night.

Mrs. DeWitt beams as she presents the Betty Crocker Homemaker of Tomorrow Award to Alice Burton as Crisco Winner, Jo Lynn Hartley, looks on.

Quality and Perfection

Guarding the students' safety is the job of patrol boys Robert Overmyer, Bill Brown, Howard Harnish, and Sam Ward.

Don Hines is shown recording his speech for the Voice of Democracy Contest which won in Huntington County and the 5th District.

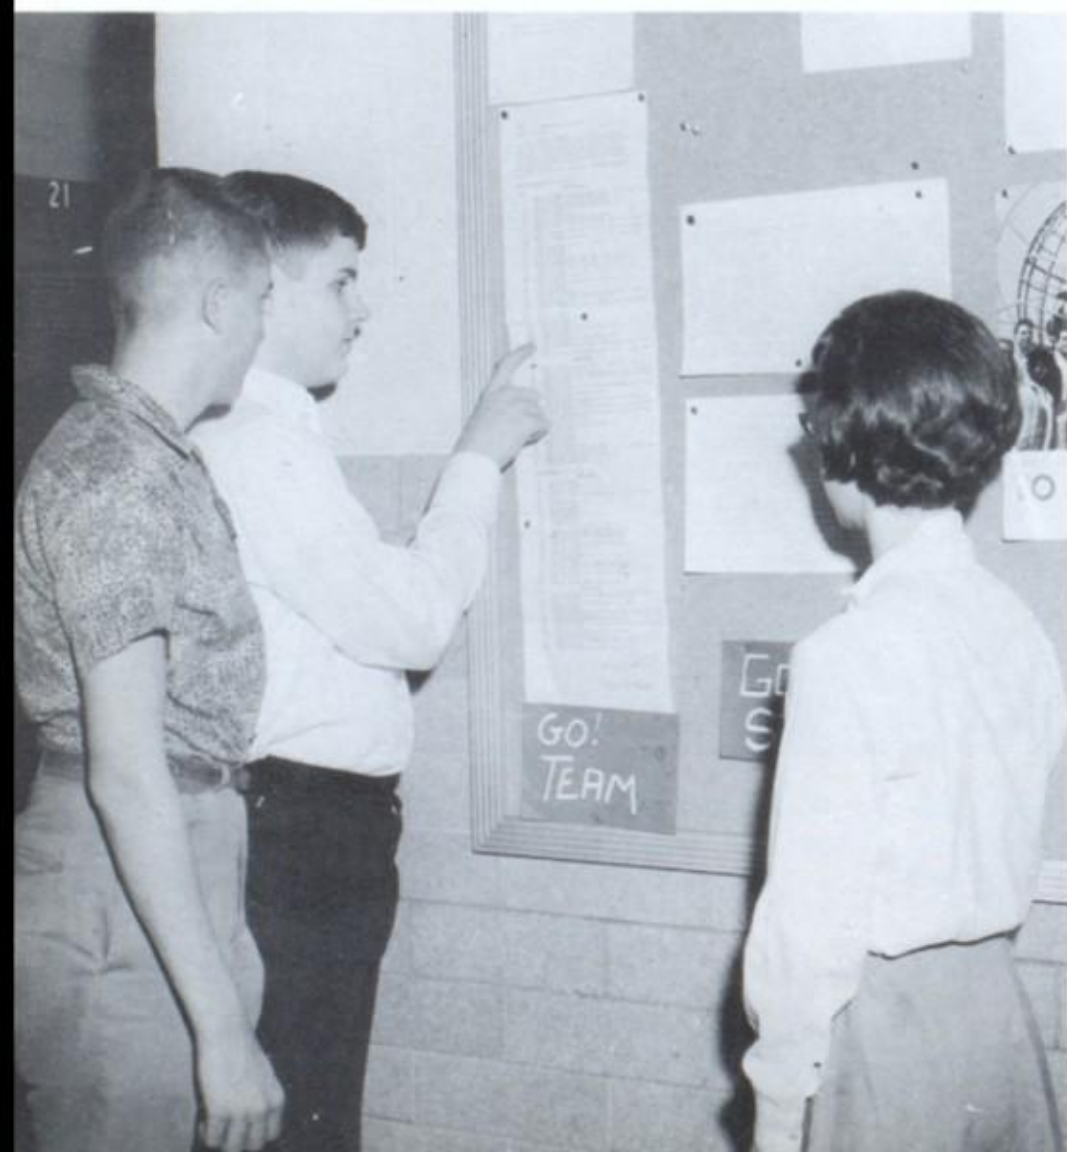

One of the favorite pastimes of Roanoke students is dancing. Here, students at a record hop are seen doing such dances as the Surf and the Swim.

A group of eighth grade boys do their best to see that Gloria Martz is late in getting to class.

We Appreciate and Applaud

Jim Horine, Jim Young, and Beverly Ritenour check the latest locker inspection report on the bulletin board.

Both students and faculty members welcomed refreshing interruptions in the familiar "grind." One of these was an outstanding assembly program presented by Charles King, singer of Negro spirituals. His performance drew a standing ovation and a wave of autograph seekers. Other assembly programs included a witty, yet meaningful talk by Don Lonie about teen-agers and their problems and an entertaining demonstration of antique guns by Ray Sullivan. Other breaks were the afternoon pep sessions which gave students a chance to show their enthusiastic support of the Stone-walls in rousing preparation for the evening games.

The different seasons of the year seasoned ordinarily calm school days. For instance, in October most students listened to the World Series over the intercom system, and on the last day of school before Christmas vacation, everybody relaxed and had fun—even the teachers.

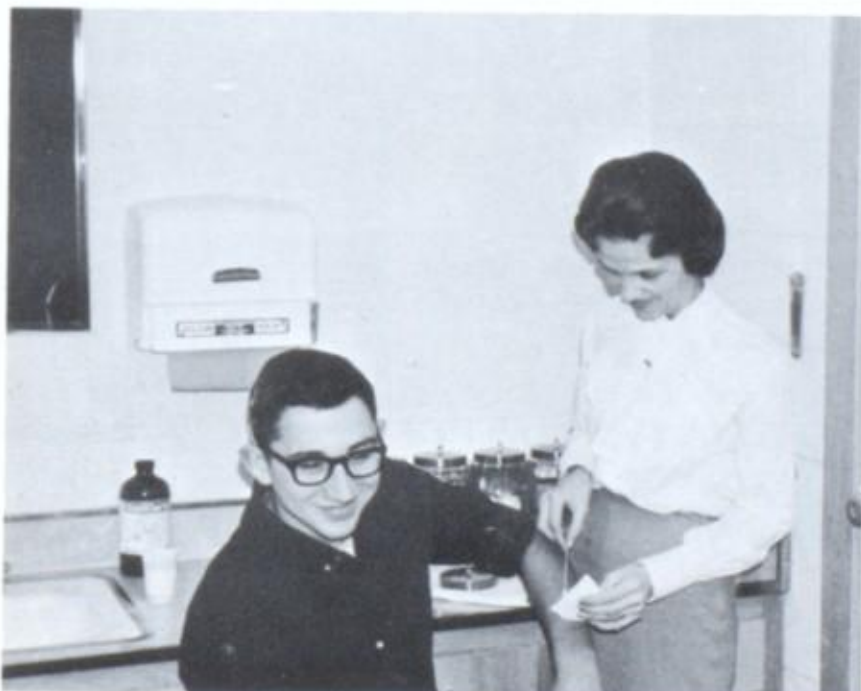

These bright but brief interludes are those which build fond memories and color every student's scholastic life—interludes which no school should be without.

Dan Drake guards Eric Forst as students gather in the gym at noon to let off steam.

a Break in the Routine

In the clinic Bob Rice receives first aid from always-helpful Mrs. Corll.

Randy Lesh and Kent Jackson stay well informed on current happenings by reading the daily newspapers in the library.

Mr. McPherren, Mrs. Everitt, and Mrs. Merckx spend spare moments in study and friendly conversation in the teacher's lounge.

We Plan and Participate

One of the busiest men in Roanoke is our custodian, Dale Rupert. He cares for and repairs equipment, keeps the heating system going, and does every other job imaginable.

The most enjoyable part of the day for many students is lunch time as can be seen on the faces of these students.

One of the many activities that breaks the routine of school life is the assembly programs. Here, Charles King is shown during the program he presented.

in Everyday Events

Roanoke students and teachers will remember the 1964-65 school year not only for the grand happenings or special events, but also for the little things, the insignificant daily trivia, and for the ordinary, organized procedure of the ordinary, organized day.

Everybody grew accustomed to the rush at noon hour when students hurried to the lunch line. Too, at noon, most students congregated in the gym to let off steam in a variety of ways—at basketball, volleyball, or simply goofing off. One did find a number, however, strolling leisurely in the halls, usually by couples, sometimes in clusters, catching their breaths before the bell rang to send them back to their books.

In the morning when students were crowding the halls, slamming locker doors, and generally causing confusion before settling down to a long school day, there were usually many students standing in front of the bulletin board, looking to see if there might be anything they should know. There were many carrying on conversations in the school rooms, laughing, talking, and waiting for the bell that would kick off still another day.

All of these moments and others add up to give a year a unique character and a specific place in the minds of those who shared them.

Mike Castor is seen hurriedly cleaning out his locker in anticipation of a locker inspection.

Minds Are Focused on the Classroom

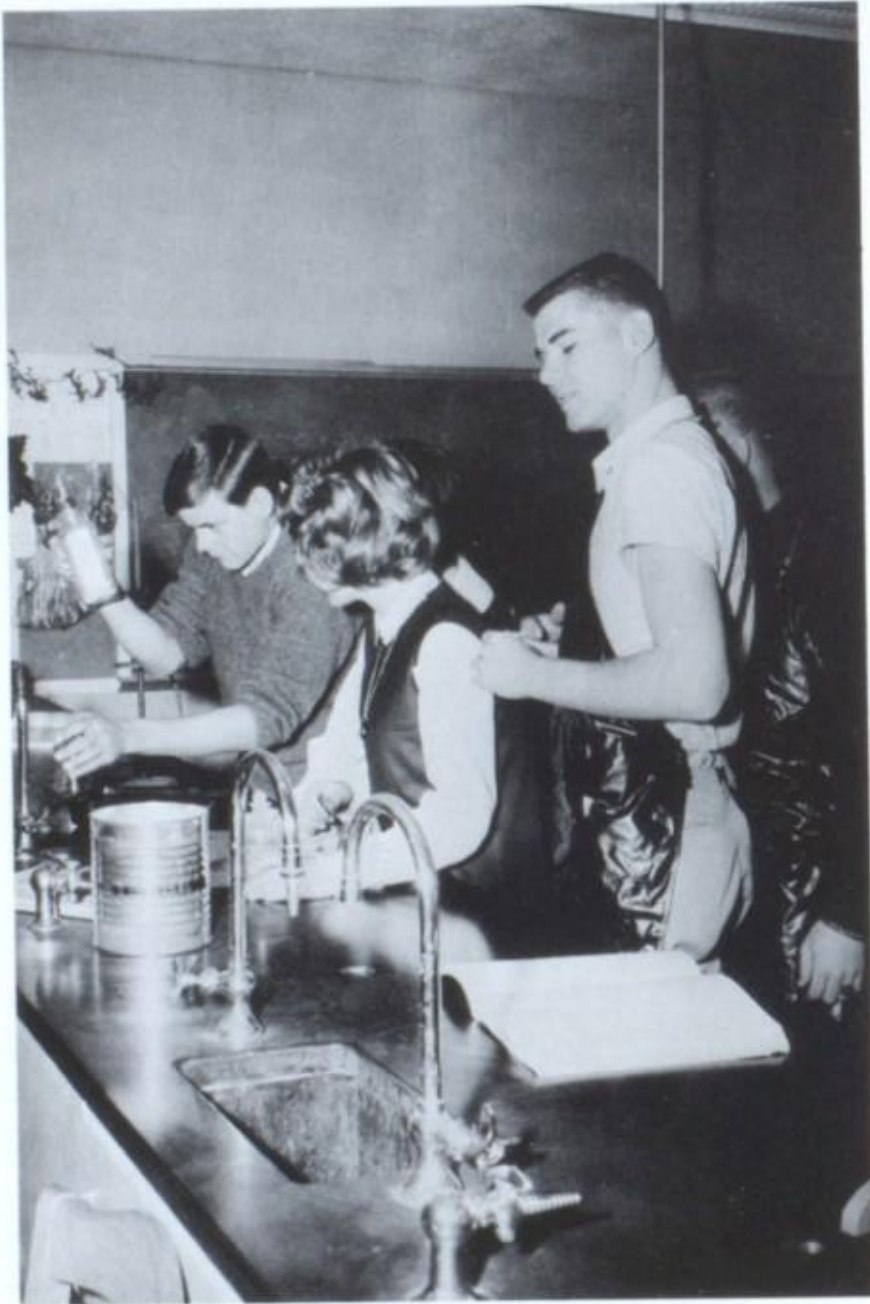

We all know that the purpose of coming to school is to get an education. The most important part of our education takes place in the classroom. Let's focus our attention, therefore, on the classroom. When you enter, you'll find approximately twenty students. The teacher may be giving a lecture on government or Latin. Whatever the subject, most students are listening eagerly. Often the teachers will give the students a study period. At this time the student gets the chance to show he has the ability to work on his own. Discussion is also a part of the daily classroom routine. Here the student has the opportunity to express his opinions on various topics and to listen to the others' views. Inside the classrooms the minds of the students are being formed. Our nation's future is simultaneously being formed. Although it's sometimes a stage for antics, we must remember that the classroom is a room for learning, and after leaving the classroom, we must focus our attention on the outside world.

Mrs. Wiedenhoeft seems pleased that Paul Swain finds the study of plant cells so interesting in biology class.

Steve Byall, Donna Trumbauer, and Phil Cooper make good use of Roanoke's well equipped laboratory in their study of chemistry.

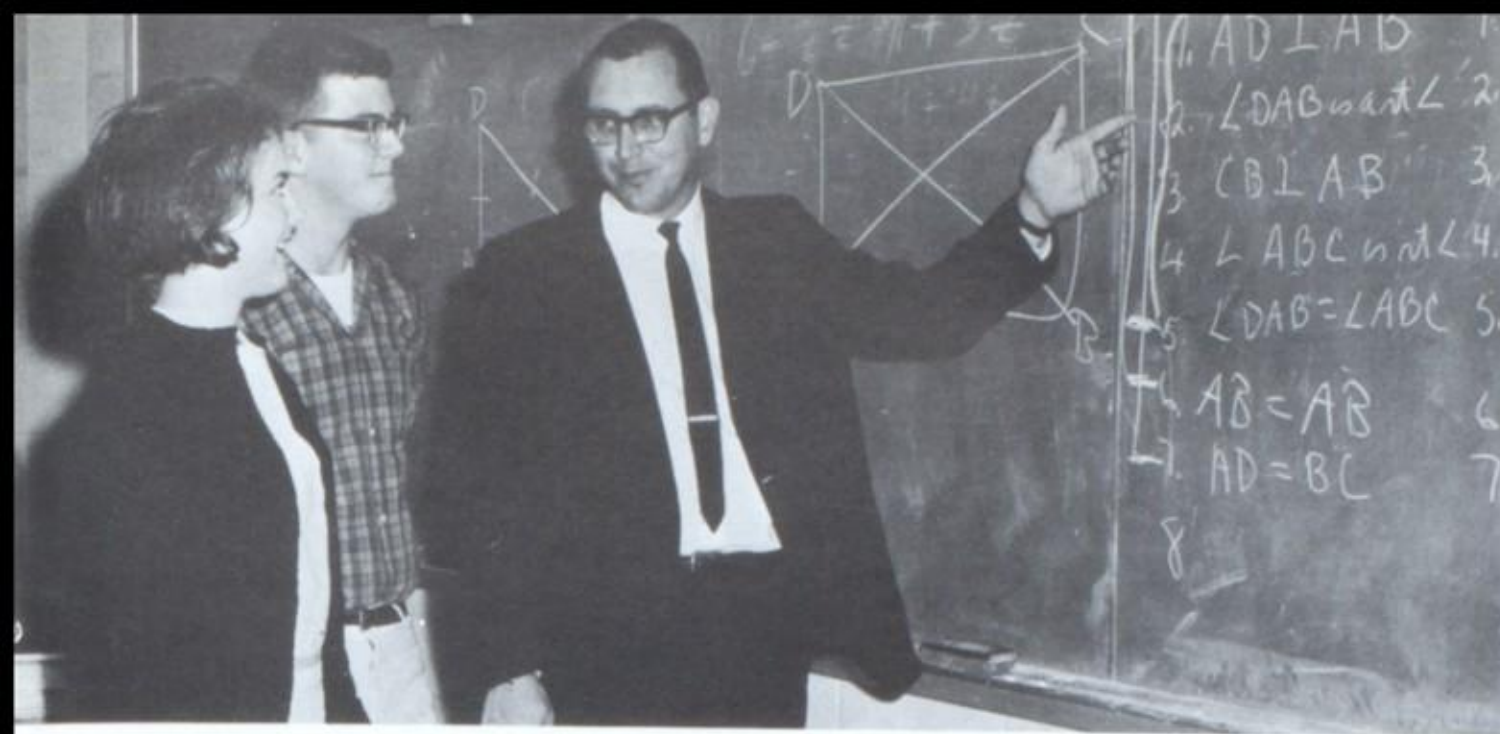

Duane Baker holds the attention of his fellow students in the physics class as he demonstrates the principle of centrifugal force.

Science Challenges RHS Pupils

Science students at Roanoke School have some of the finest facilities and equipment that can be found in any school laboratory. Whether it's the dark room, the huge supply of chemicals, or the microscope, we have the instruments for an endless number of experiments at RHS. These available facilities coupled with fine instruction make our science department one of the top in the county.

This year, for the first time, chemistry and physics were both offered. Along with biology, the Roanoke students have a solid three-year science curriculum.

In biology the students learn of the life process of plants and animals. A great deal of time is spent in dissection and laboratory work as well as in discussion. In chemistry various elements and chemical structures along with the composition of materials are studied. Physics deals primarily with the study of light, sound, nuclear energy, and a material's physical structure.

Mr. Meadows patiently explains a geometry proof to Susan Bauer and Dave Ritenour.

Fundamentals, Formulas, and Figures Are the Bases for Math

The Roanoke High School Mathematics Department is one of the best staffed and best equipped to be found anywhere. From the freshman year of algebra or general math through the senior year of college algebra and trigonometry, Roanoke's math students have the utmost opportunity to become proficient in the art of Euclid and Pythagoras.

Entering freshmen must take either general math or Algebra I. Generally those who take algebra as freshmen, study geometry in their sophomore year. From here opportunity is open to the study of advanced algebra for juniors and of college algebra and trigonometry for seniors.

Popularity of math is evidenced by the many students who take it. These students are learning through the experience of practical math problems how to better interpret and solve common, everyday problems in later life. Many prepare for math as an occupation after further college training. Through the understanding of math principles which are stressed at Roanoke, unlimited opportunity is open to the future mathematician.

Mr. Ehlers helps Greg Brown, Karen Crow, and Donna Husband work problems in the 7th grade math class.

Alice Burton improves her delivery by setting off her words with gestures.

Myra Corll works on a theme in grammar and composition class as Mrs. Hudson looks on approvingly.

Students Bridge the World Knowledge of People

Students in developmental reading take a power builder as Mrs. Berglund prepares to click the stop watch.

Learning how to communicate effectively with one another, and expressing our ideas accurately is a skill that we all try to improve. Aiding us in this pursuit are Mrs. Hudson, who teaches senior grammar and composition, English literature, and sophomore English; Mrs. Merckx, who teaches freshman and junior literature; and Mrs. Berglund, who teaches speech and developmental reading.

During the freshman, sophomore, and junior years, the students are taught the basics of English. Developmental reading may be taken by anyone from freshmen on up. This course helps the student to improve his reading comprehension and speed. Senior grammar and composition gives the students a chance to express themselves through writing. During the second semester English literature is offered. In speech class students learn poise while speaking before a group. Giving various speeches, debating, and contributing to group discussion keep the students busy. All these classes make up our excellent English department at R.H.S.

and Gain Better Through Languages

"¿Como esta usted?" This is how the Spanish students are greeted by their teacher, Señor Fernandez-Cuervo, every morning at the start of class. Spanish, a new subject on the curriculum this year, caught the interest of thirty-eight students. A former citizen of Cuba, Mr. Fernandez-Cuervo's native language is Spanish. Not only do the students learn Spanish by listening to him and by repeating phrases, but he learns English by talking with the students and hearing them speak.

Supplementing the language program is a two year course of Latin which is taught by Mrs. Merckx. Students who are planning to go on to college are urged to take both years. Oddly enough, students find that Latin helps them greatly in English since many English words are derived from Latin. As the students increase their vocabulary in Latin, their word power automatically increases in English. They find that learning foreign languages is fun and beneficial too.

Mr. Fernandez-Cuervo explains Spanish verbs to Cindy Hartley as Phil Cooper watches.

Studying Past and Present, We View Future

Social studies play an outstanding part among the many courses offered at R.H.S. Most students take advantage of the Social Studies Department, composed of Mr. Everitt, Mr. Crum, and Mrs. Harman and supplemented by televised instruction.

The seniors take government, which teaches them the machinery and structure of U. S. democracy, and instills in them the color and spirit of American politics. The class was very active during the national campaign, and conducted the school's mock general election.

The juniors enjoy U. S. history, becoming familiar with the grand sweep of our country's past. They come to know the heroes every American should love, and learn of great roots from which our nation has grown.

Similarly, the freshmen become informed in the annals of other nations. They explore a wide scope of events reaching back through pre-history, and learn world understanding.

Other courses are psychology and sociology, taught by Charles Crum. Psychology shows students the workings of their minds in daily life, and sociology teaches the whys and wherefores of human societies.

Business Students Develop Speed, Accuracy, and Efficiency

Classes consist not only of algebra, social studies and grammar, but also business courses. Among these are general business, Typing I and II, bookkeeping, and shorthand.

Mr. Hammel attempts to introduce the students, as freshmen, to the fundamentals of general business, as sophomores, to the skills of typing, and as seniors, to the mastery of shorthand. Freshmen are eager to learn the ways of the business world which are taught to them in general business. Mr. Hammel toils the hardest in first year typing to teach the basic techniques; in the second year he concentrates on speed and accuracy. Shorthand, a new subject on the curriculum this year, fascinates the senior girls.

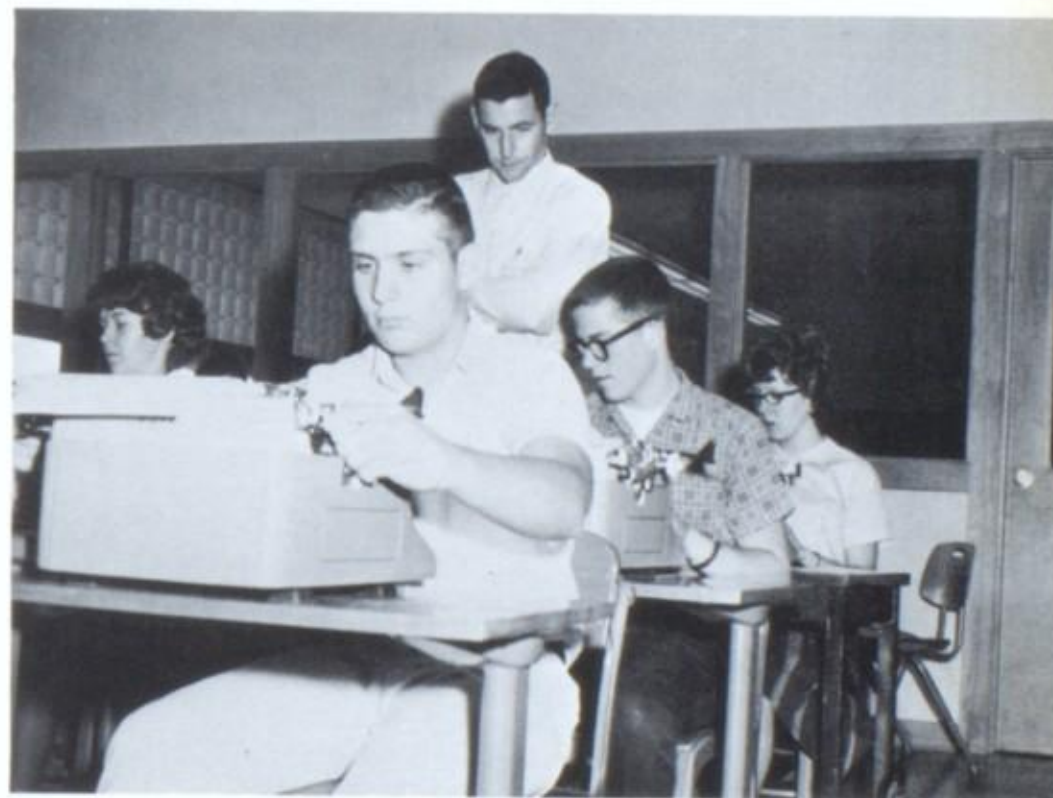

Joining the teaching staff in business is Mr. Felton who instructs the junior and senior students in the essentials of bookkeeping. Through the efforts of Mr. Hammel and Mr. Felton, the students are prepared to enter the business world.

Mr. Felton assists Sharon Burns with her bookkeeping assignment.

Students Take Pride in Skillful Hands and Quick Minds

Tom Coe creates a lamp for a shop project.

The curriculum of our school does not consist of solely "book-work." There are courses offered pertaining to practical living, each needed by many students.

One of these is home economics, taught by Mrs. DeWitt. In this class girls are introduced to the routines of successful homemaking. They are taught to wash dishes, cook, and sew well, among other typical domestic activities.

Mr. Swan, in the Industrial Arts Department, helps develop the skills of the more dexterous students, and provides instruction in many facets of manual training, from woodworking to mechanical drawing to auto mechanics.

Young artists, and students desiring to better appreciate the beauty of their world, flock to Mrs. Foote's art classes. In two classes—a junior high and a senior high class—Mrs. Foote directs many activities, for example, portrait drawing, and also teaches the techniques every amateur artist should know.

Our community benefits from these courses, and our students receive a more balanced education in preparation for future life.

Rita Edwards and Charmaine Blanchard polish their culinary talents in the well-equipped home economics kitchens.

Mrs. Foote enjoys the creativity of her art students.

Several sophomore boys play a fast game of basketball in physical education.

Freshman and sophomore girls march briskly around the gym as a part of their usual routine in physical education.

We Gain Better Living Through Physical Fitness and Safety

In recent years many people have taken part in various physical fitness programs. Roanoke High School is no exception. Mrs. Schoeff and Mr. Felton have done their best to keep RHS students physically fit through daily exercise. Grades seven through ten participate in such activities as volleyball, dodgeball, and calisthenics.

Safety is taught to Roanoke students in the driver education course. Mr. Felton braves the dangers of this course to teach the fundamentals of operating an automobile to the members of the sophomore class. The car, donated by J. E. Zent and Sons, is put through the various driving procedures by the eager students. Because of this course the safety of the community, as well as that of the student, is insured.

Joy is written on the face of Rita Hughes as she prepares to take another driving lesson from driver education instructor, Mr. Felton.

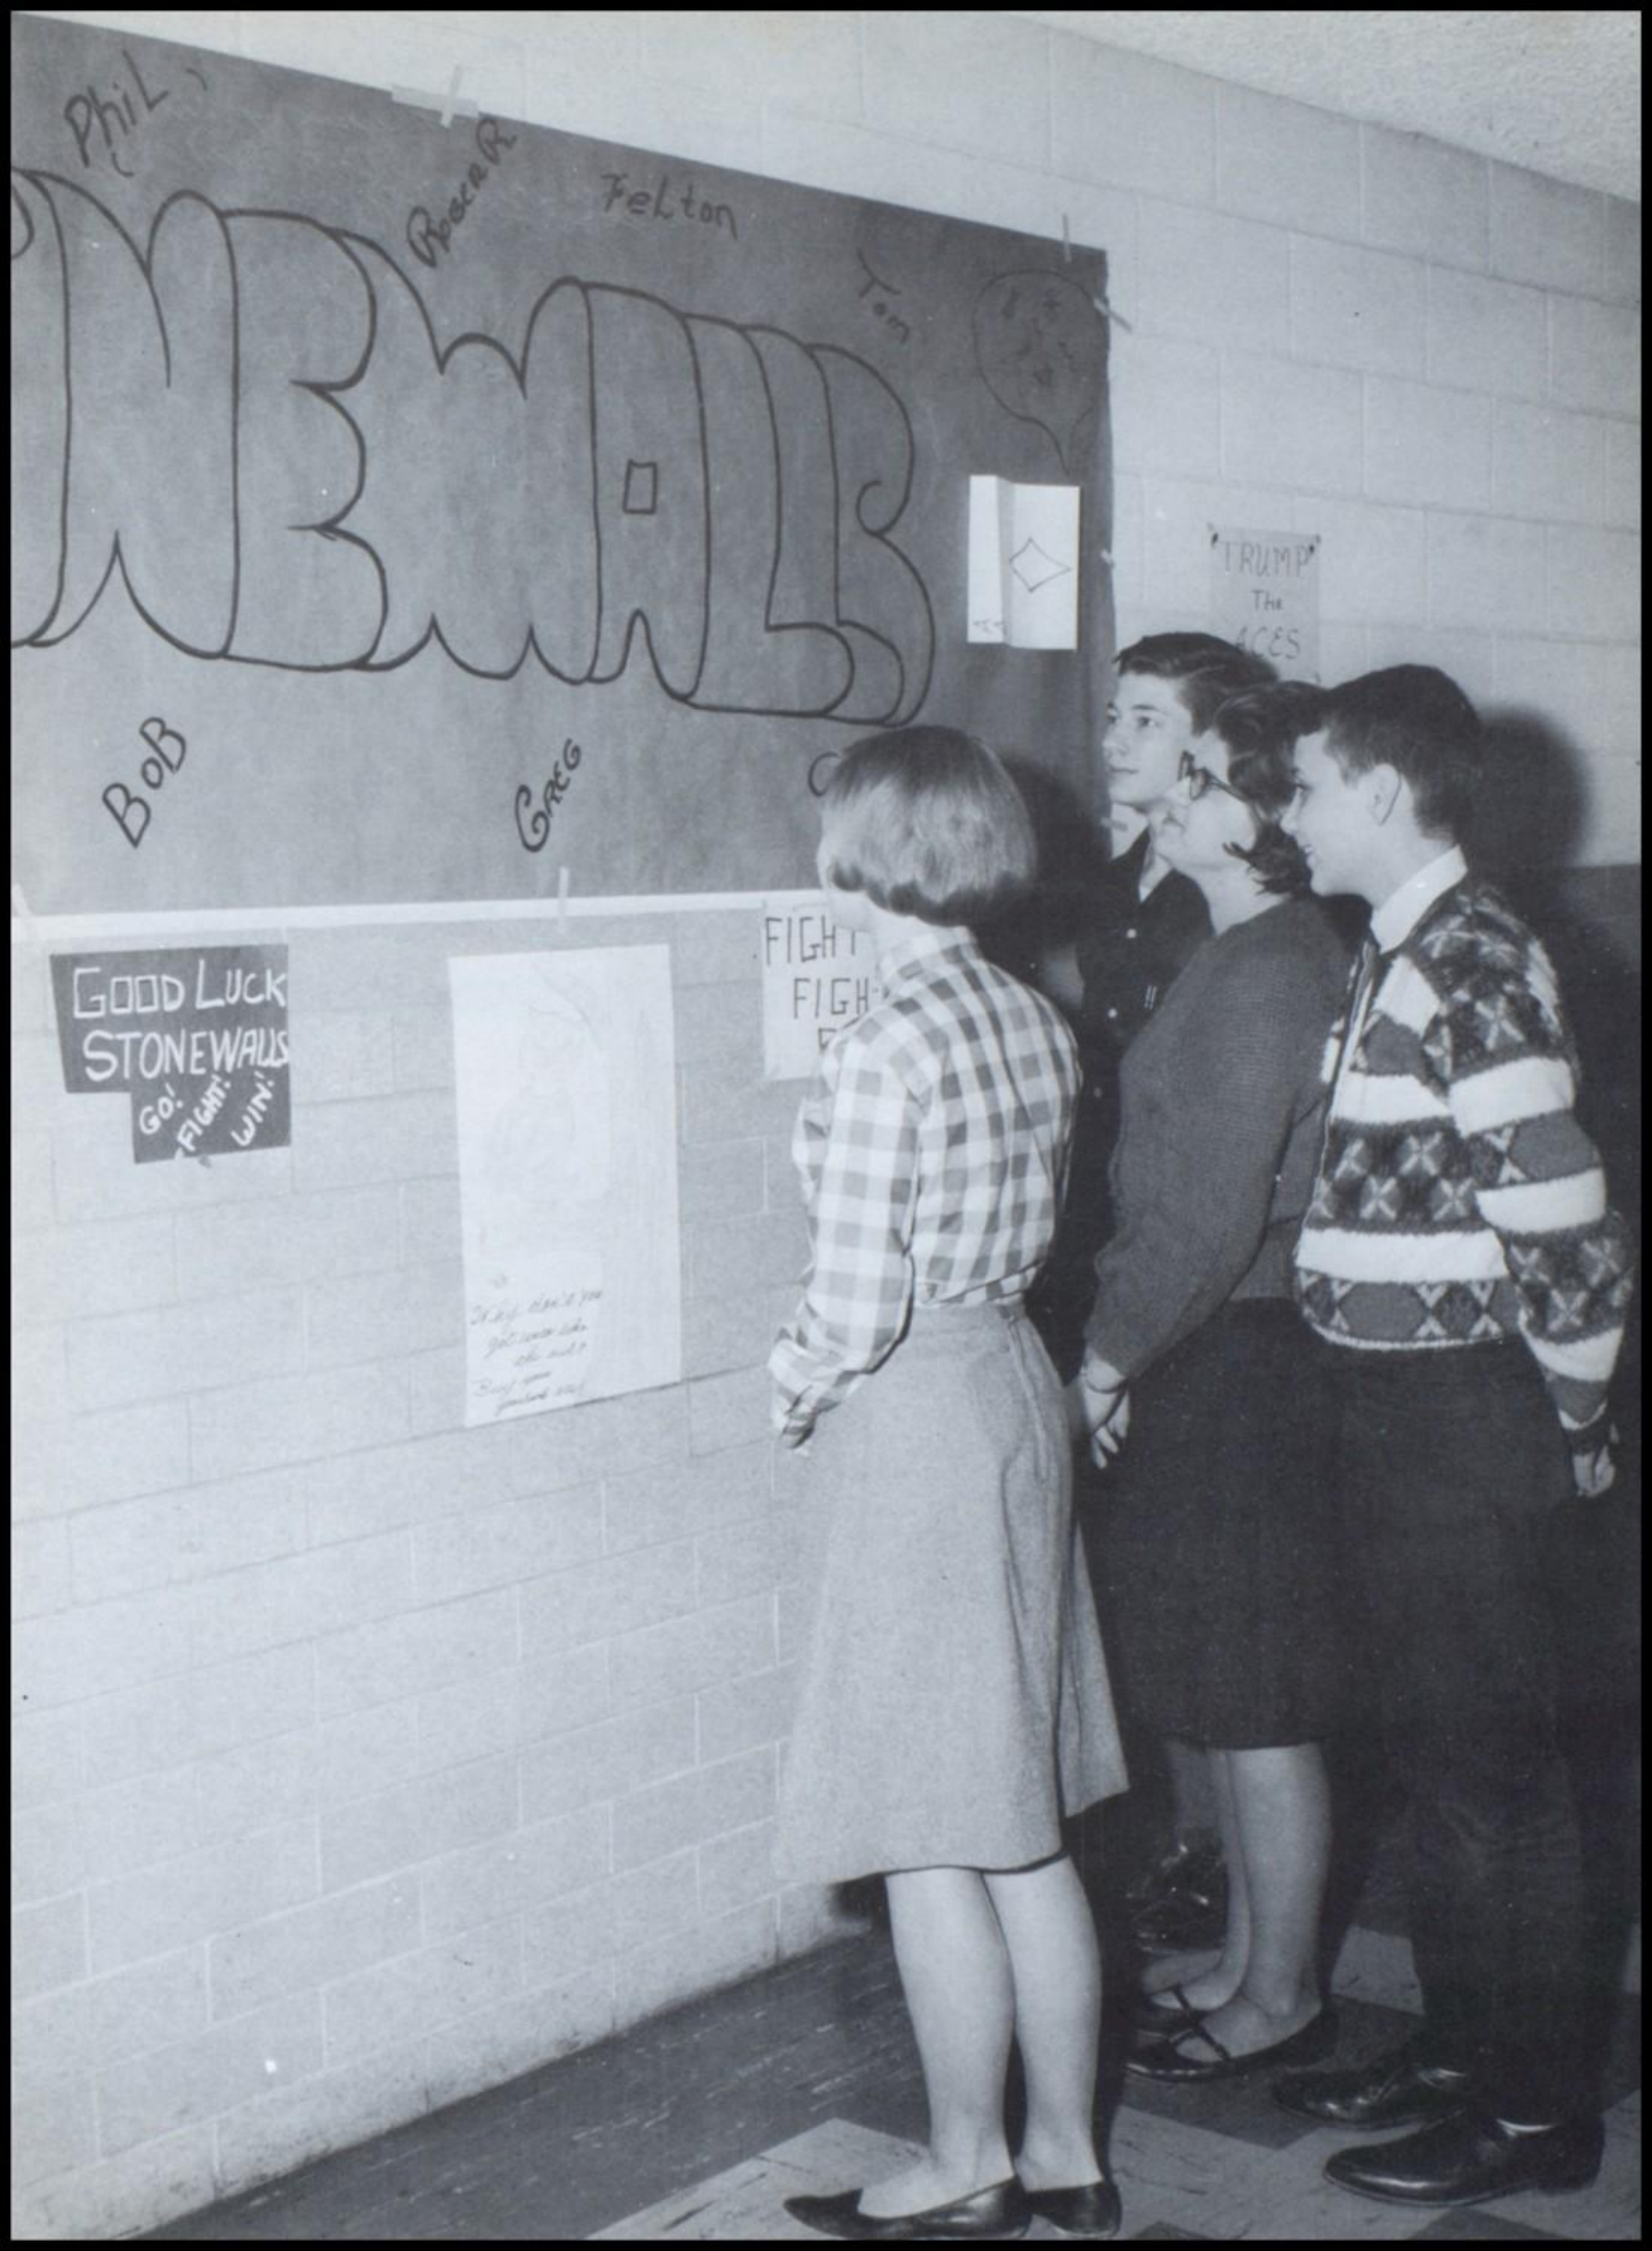

RHS Students Lead Active Lives

Although reading and studying are good exercises for the mind, other activities also go into making a well-rounded individual. To help achieve this goal, students are offered the opportunity to join various clubs and organizations. Among these are band, chorus, 4-H, sports, Red Cross, Sunshine Society, and a Spanish club. In these groups students have a chance to further their experience and knowledge by taking part in activities in which they may have special interests. Not only do they get a break from daily routines, but they also learn to become leaders, to accept responsibility, and to get along with others.

The school can be seen buzzing with activity as groups and organizations prepare for parties and money-making projects. Many times the walls and bulletin boards are decorated with brightly colored posters, advertising a coming event, and students can be seen gathering to see what the happenings will be.

These various activities lend spirit to and brighten the days here at our school.

Saxmuri Staff Works Hard To Produce 18th Edition

This year's Saxmuri staff consists of (sitting) Kathy McNamara, Mrs. Hudson, Don Hines, and Tom McPherren. (Standing) Gloria Martz, Donna Rollins, Cheryl Brewer, Bonnie Glick, Alice Burton, Bonnie Sunderman, Jill Beckmann, Geoff Farrell, Bill Gruesbeck, Richard Smith, Bill Brindle, Donna Trumbauer, and Linda Winger.

The three staff editors, sophomore, Tom McPherren; senior, Don Hines; and junior, Kathy McNamara cluster around the files as Don points out reference material.

Bonnie Sunderman and Linda Winger busily work on the Richard Smith, Bill Brindle, Donna Trumbauer, and Linda Winger.

Have you ever wondered what it takes to make a yearbook? It takes hard work, patience, and a certain amount of caring. You have to want the book to be the best one yet, and be willing to work persistently to make it reach that goal.

The staff is willing to work hard to attain a certain amount of personal satisfaction, but even more it is to experience the thrill of presenting their eighteenth edition, and trying to make this one better than all the other seventeen.

It is said that one picture is worth a thousand words, but, put the picture and the words together, and you create a lasting treasure of memories. If we have succeeded in creating a treasure for you, it makes all our efforts worth while.

1965 Saxmuri Queen is senior Cindy Hartley.

Third Annual Saxmuri Dance Huge Success

The Saxmuri Queen Contest started when each of the upper four classes chose its queen candidate. The contest, conducted a little differently this year, was based on yearbook sales. When a student bought a yearbook he could vote for the candidate of his choice.

Soon the night of the dance arrived. The air was tense with excitement. It was almost time for the crowning of the queen. The candidates were in the wings. Who would it be? Would it be Janice Caley, the freshman candidate; Jo Lynn Hartley, the sophomore candidate; Karen Keefer, the junior candidate; or Cindy Hartley, the senior candidate?

The moment of decision was at hand. Everyone was on the edge of his seat.

Bill Brindle and Goeff Farrell, Saxmuri staff members in charge of the contest, appeared with the results of the contest in a sealed envelope. There was a dramatic pause. Then, after what seem an eternity, Bill opened the envelope. The winner was . . . Cindy Hartley!

At the Saxmuri Dance, junior Marvin Rice helps himself as Jill Beckmann stands hoping he won't spill any.

Active Council Promotes Better School Relations

Student Council members this year are Don Hines (president), Donna Husband, Robert Fairchild, Bill Brindle, Larry Williams, Charles Crum (advisor), Tom Brewer, Tom McPherran, Susan Bauer, Charlene Langston, Mavis Myers, Bonnie Glick, Alice Burton, and Paul Przeracki.

The opinions and suggestions of Roanoke students can be presented at Student Council meetings. This year's council was active in promoting harmonious school relations. Our council consists of one boy and one girl from each of the upper six grades, plus the president elected by the entire student body.

The main project of this year's council was re-writing the outdated constitution. They also supervised the cheerleader election, sponsored a WOWO record hop, selected and conducted assembly programs, collected money for the WOWO Penny Pitch, and held various money-making projects.

Students show their interest in self-government and in democratic processes by active participation in the Student Council.

Student Council officers are Tom Brewer, parliamentarian; Alice Burton, secretary-treasurer; Don Hines, president; and Tom McPherran, vice-president.

El Circulo De Español

A new club was added to the list this year. It is the El Circulo de español. The first event held by the club was a Christmas party. It was an unusual one at that. After all, how many Christmas parties do you attend that have spicy Spanish food, a piñata filled to the brim with unknown treats, and a teacher to explain Spanish dances to you? These were the activities enjoyed by the members of the Spanish Club. Anyone who has taken Spanish previously or is taking it during the school term may join the club.

Spanish Club officers are Ellen Jo Merckx, treas.; Phil Cooper, pres.; Donna Trumbauer, vice-pres.; and Rhonda Trumbauer, reporter.

Volunteers Perform Invaluable Services

Librarians are Marilyn Schoeff, Donna Rollins, Mrs. Hudson, Lesa Kreienbrink, Alice Burton, and Colleen Bauer.

There are various opportunities for volunteers to contribute valuable services to the school and the community. Outstanding examples are in the Red Cross and the library.

Willing students lighten the load for Mrs. Hudson by checking books in and out and keeping the library neat.

Among the many duties of the Red Cross organization are working with the bloodmobile when it comes to Roanoke and collecting money. Several of our members work at the Veterans' Hospital in Fort Wayne. Learning to help others is one facet of our educational goal which is exemplified by these helpful groups.

Chorus Sings Its Way Into the Hearts of Students

Something new in the chorus this year was the addition of male voices which improved the resonance of the already fine sounding group. It is hoped that both boys and girls will continue to show interest in the coming years.

Chorus, which is taught by Mr. Walker, is enjoyed by all the members. It gives them a break from the hard grind of daily assignments. Doesn't singing lighten the hearts of everyone? Also it helps the students work together as one while they are singing beautiful melodies in harmony. There are various duties that must be tended to, such as keeping the music filed properly and keeping count of points made by members. The officers see that these jobs are done. The chorus, a great asset to Roanoke High, provides enjoyable entertainment for the school and the community.

Band Adds Color and Spirit

Furnishing entertainment at concerts, boosting the school spirit at basketball games, and upholding the honor of Roanoke High at contests are just a few functions and accomplishments of the band throughout its busy year under the capable supervision of their director, Mr. Walker.

Within the band are two complementary musical groups—the dance band and the German band. The dance band played at concerts and at the annual penny supper where it added a little "bounce" with its popular tunes. Encouraging enthusiasm among the entire student body at pep sessions was the German band. The members of this little group also displayed their talents at band concerts.

The entire band is a cultural asset and a source of pride for our school.

Officers of the Senior Band are Marilyn Schoeff, sec.; Judy Burton, lib.; Steve Eisenhut, capt.; Carol Schoeff, lib.; Tom McPherren, asst. manager; and Lynn Thorn, manager.

Extra Groups

Roanoke is fortunate to have many young people taking advantage of the benefits found in the music department. Groups smaller than the full band play a prominent part in this department. One such group is the dance band, which participated in band concerts, besides performing at such events as the Penny Supper, and the NISBOVA contest in Fort Wayne. On the vocal side, the girls' trio provided us with sweet music. These groups and others furnished us with fine music during the year, and we salute them.

The Girls' Trio consists of Karen Burkart, Rita Edwards, and Connie Lund, with Carol Schoeff, pianist.

One ensemble that participated in the NISBOVA contest was a flute duet made up of Connie Lund and Karen Burkart.

Add Variety to the Music Department

In the beginning and junior bands, students develop their talents so that they will be prepared to enter the senior band. Although they play for some activities, they spend most of their class time improving their technique. When they tire of practicing, the students are told to remember that age-old saying, "Practice makes perfect." Both the beginning and junior bands are under the leadership of Mr. Walker. Considering the enjoyment and accomplishment the students receive through membership, they find that it is well worth their time and effort.

Girls' 4-H is part of an extensive program which prepares girls for homemaking. Girls gain leadership through instruction in the Junior Leaders Club. Those who are junior leaders are always ready to help and encourage the other members. The girls have the responsibility to complete all their projects. Sometimes this proves to be difficult, but for those who accomplish this goal, a sense of pride is felt. A good example of leadership is Ellen Merckx. Ellen was chosen as Huntington County's 4-H queen and represented the county at the Indiana State Fair. The 4-H motto is, "To make the best better," which is what the members try to do.

Many boys and girls, citizens of rural America, benefit from Boys' 4-H every year. Members were engaged in numerous activities such as the annual 4-H Fair, where several "grand champion" and "A" ratings were achieved. Also enjoyed are parties and regular meetings which enable the youth to get together to learn and to have fun. All Boys' 4-H members are proud of their organization, and the entire student body should be, too.

Juniors Have Hit With "Stuck Pot"

Mrs. Merckx points out stage directions to Greg Wiley as Cheryl Brewer, Bonnie Glick, and Bill Gruesbeck look on.

The juniors are caught in action as they rehearse the dance scene from Stuck Pot.

The juniors "beat their brains out," so to speak, trying to find a play that was suited to their class. After much deliberation they decided on Stuck Pot.

Stuck Pot is the story about a dance sponsored jointly by the Jason Boys' School and the nearby Girls' Academy. It seems that some boy is always getting stuck with some "lemon" for his date at the dance. The boys decide to establish a consolation prize. This "stuck pot" consists of money chipped in by all the boys. When the girls discover this scheme, they are absolutely furious and to counteract it, establish a "stuck pot" of their own.

Some junior girls look over a variety of play books as they try to decide which one to present.

Seniors Entertain With Successful Variety Show

This year's senior class entertained with three one act plays. They were "Antic Spring," "Bachelor of the Year," and "They Put on a Play."

"They Put on a Play" is about a middle-aged woman, Mrs. Cameron, who has written, produced, and directed a play entitled "Crime Does Not Pay." It turns out that an actual escaped convict does get into the play by mistake and portrays the criminal in Mrs. Cameron's production.

In "Antic Spring" three young couples started out on a picnic in hopes that it would be enjoyable and romantic. However, conflict comes between the couples and the picnic ends with dampened spirits.

"Bachelor of the Year" concerns a young and available school principal who was chosen Bachelor of the Year by the single women in the community. This is followed by a series of proposals from the single women teachers. He is caught, though, by the one he least suspects, his secretary.

The seniors perform a scene from "They Put on a Play," one of the three acts of their variety show.

Nearly all the members of the senior class participated in the senior play.

Sunshine Society

The Sunshine Society's motto is "Others," and our members try to live up to it.

In their endeavor to help others, they have had several projects throughout the year. One of their major projects is that of visiting the nursing home in downtown Roanoke. During the Christmas season they caroled at several homes, including the nursing home. In order to raise funds for their contribution to the Riley Hospital they have had various money making projects. These have included cake raffles, record hops, and the annual Sunshine Dance which was held at the Huntington LaFontaine Country Club. Again, this year, the girls honored their "ideal ladies," persons whom they look up to as examples of mature, exemplary womanhood, by having a tea for them.

The girls make others happy by their efforts, and in turn they are made happy. Knowing that someone's day has been made a little brighter encourages them to keep up the good work.

Roanoke's delegates to the S.S.S. Convention at Ossian were Ellen Merckx, Jean Williams, Ellen Simon, Jill Beckmann, Carol Schoeff, and Connie Lund.

Thinks of Others First

The students thoroughly enjoy themselves at a Sunshine Society Record Hop.

All Eyes Are Fixed on the Stonewalls

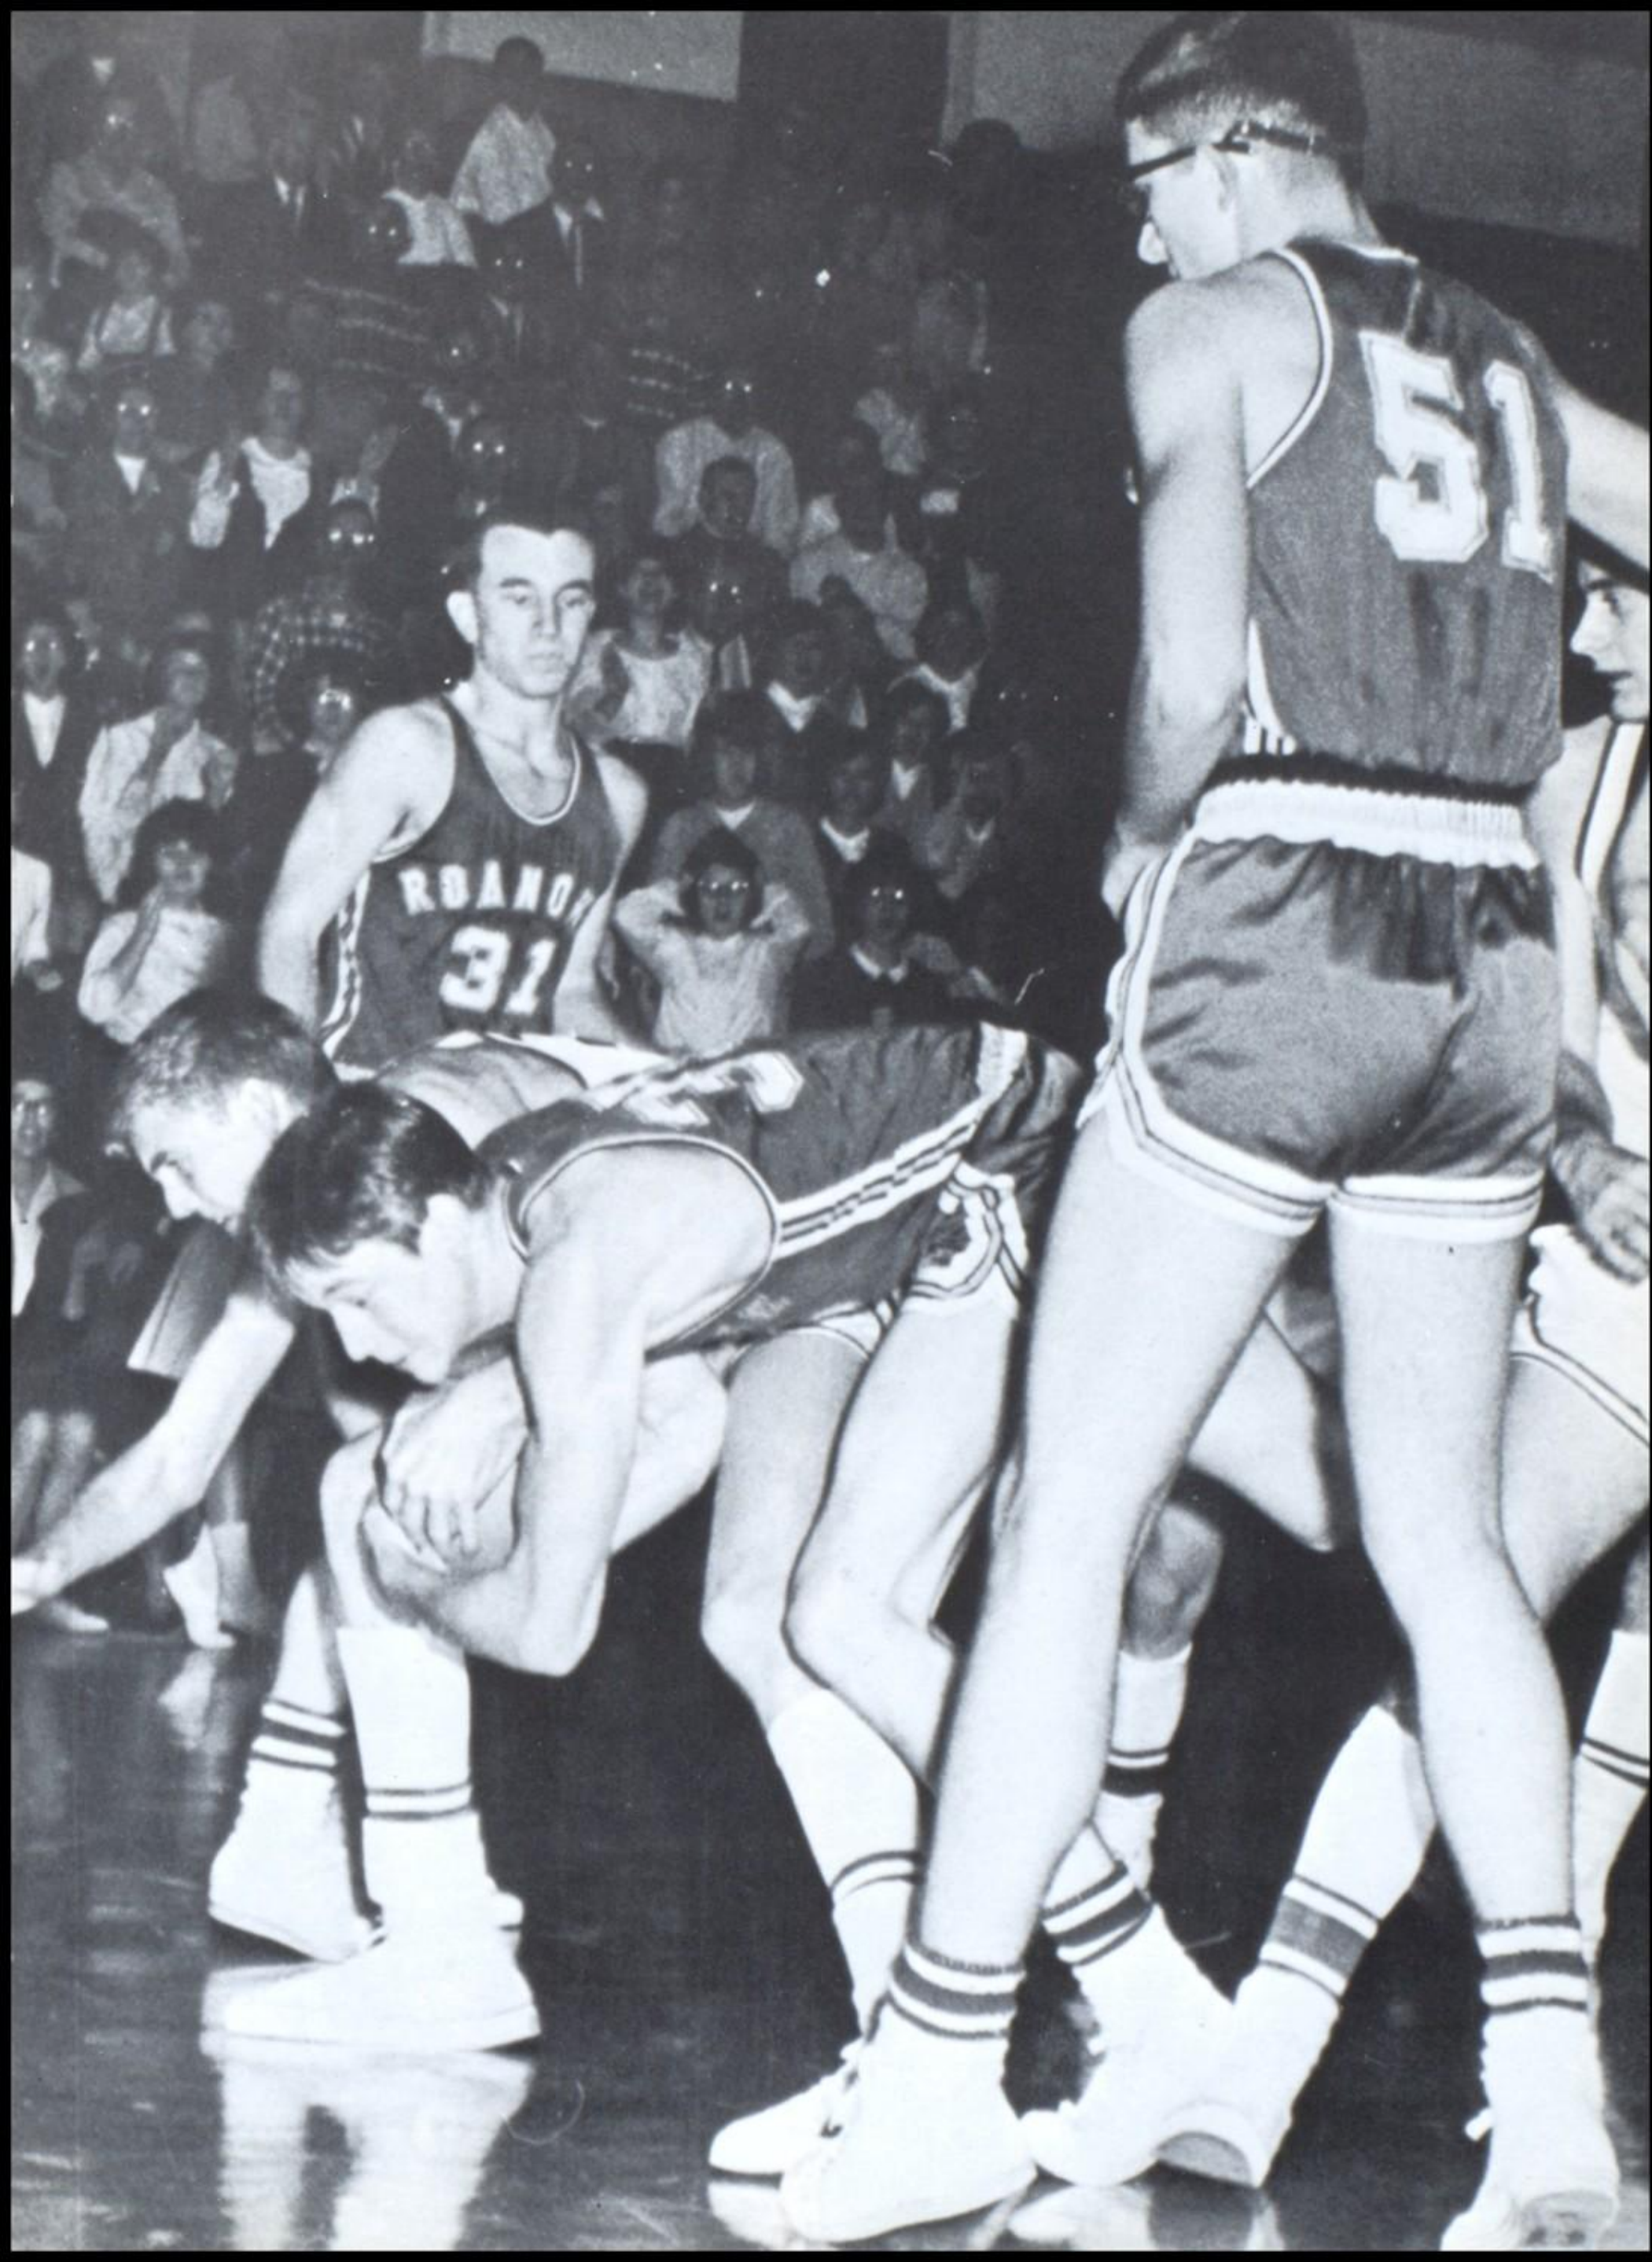

All of this year's athletic teams were in the public eye. They attracted fans and followers with their fine caliber of play and adherence to the motto, "Sports our game—sportsmanship our aim."

Our extensive athletic program includes baseball and cross country in the fall, basketball in the winter, and boys and girls volleyball and track in the spring. Basketball and track are also offered to the junior high school boys. The forming of athletic prowess, high character, and sportsmanship among Roanoke's prep athletes is in the competent hands of Athletic Director and Coach Mr. Felton, and Coaches Meadows, Swan, and Everitt.

All of Roanoke's teams performed admirably during the year and provided area fans with thrill upon thrill, proving that Roanoke has the top athletic program among county schools by winning two of the three County All-Sports Trophies presented and making a strong bid for a third.

Roanoke athletes are proud to don the green and white, and Roanoke fans are proud to have them wearing our colors.

Looking over statistics and preparing for another victory is our coach, Mr. Felton.

Compiling statistics and caring for equipment are jobs of the managers, Brent DeWitt, Tim Abbott, and Bob Raines.

Green and Whites

Attain New Heights

For the second consecutive year the Roanoke Stonewalls captured the Huntington County Conference Crown. This year they achieved new heights, however, by winning the title with an unblemished 8-0 record. The entire season record was a respectable fifteen wins and six losses against one of the toughest schedules in the area.

The mighty green and white was piloted by Coach Eugene Felton. Through his unwavering patience and skillful supervision Roanoke fans were treated to many thrills and exciting moments. Coach Felton again had an abundance of capable ball players with which to mold a smoothly operating team. Although five members of this year's team will be lost via graduation, five lettermen will be returning from which to build another fine team.

Lending color and enthusiasm to the ball games were the three varsity cheerleaders. All of these people and more made it a highly successful campaign on the RHS hardwoods.

Reserves Show Great Potential

The primary function of a reserve basketball team is to give younger athletes a chance to gain experience by participating in the contests before varsity ball games. This year's Stonewall B-Team performed admirably on the court and received the necessary experience to make them potential varity material. While accumulating this basketball savvy, they provided countless thrills for RHS fans, compiling a record of five wins and twelve defeats. Even though they did experience a losing record for the season, Coach Felton taught them countless fundamentals.

Two girls full of vitality and enthusiasm are Connie Lund and Jo Lynn Hartley, cheerleaders for the B-team.

Coach Swan's fighting freshmen, though compiling only a 1-4 season record, gained valuable basketball know-how by long hours of practice and game experience. The freshman basketball program is an exceptionally important one in the development of material for future reserve and varsity basketball duty. Mr. Swan and his charges aimed for this goal and appear to have reached it, showing rapid improvement as the season progressed.

Junior Stonewalls Capture County Tourney

Everitt. Row 3: Randy Rice, Kent Johnson, Don Dunfee, Jim Horine, Jay Martz, and Brent Augspurger.

Jackson Township School was the host for this year's Junior High County Tourney. As the final game ended, the Junior Stonewalls were trimming the nets, the symbol of winning a basketball tournament. In the finals the Stonewalls opened a scrappy Warren quintet 39-25. Enroute to the title game, Roanoke disposed of Jefferson and Lancaster.

In his fifth year of junior high coaching, Mr. Everitt led a capable, fighting group of seventh and eighth grade ball players to the first junior high county championship in the school's history with a 22-2 season record. The seventh grade team went undefeated with a 9-0 mark, while the eighth grade chalked up a record of thirteen wins and two losses.

Through the skills learned and experience gained, the junior high boys are prepared to play high school basketball in later years.

These three energetic girls who lead yells for the junior high team are Tonya Swain, Patty Ambriole, and Candy Hartley.

Cinders Fly As Thinlies Set Records

Track takes a great deal of conditioning which these boys are finding out as they "run in place."

The cinders flew as spring rolled around and the Roanoke Stonewall thinlies took to the track. This year the track men were operating under a new coach, Mr. Meadows.

Track is a sport which gives the individual an opportunity to excel in any number of events. The participant may improve at his own speed to whatever extent he wishes. Many boys choose running events from the dashes and hurdles to the long grinding mile run, while others participate in such field events as the high jump, broad jump, pole vault, and shot put.

Although the Saxmuri goes to press before track season officially opens, prospects look excellent for a highly rewarding season.

Volleyball and Cross Country

Diamond Dandies Compile Another Winning Record

Mike Dennis is carefully watched by an Andrews player as he begins to lead off third.

The Roanoke Stonewall's diamond fortune was good again this year. Although they didn't win the tough Huntington County Conference, they displayed some fine hitting, fielding, and base-running in compiling a very respectable record of five wins and three defeats.

Senior Roger Colclessor was again the batting standout with a fine .345 average. Several other Stonewall batters were over the .300 mark. Don Rice, another senior, led in the pitching duties with an enviable 4-1 record. Juniors Gary Ayers and Roger Rice also did a commendable job on the mound. Although there were individual standouts, it was team effort that made the Stonewalls click.

Personalities in the Spotlight

What is a school made of? Schools are constructed with numerous building materials, it is true, but people are what really make a school tick, and ours is no exception.

Walking to school marks the beginning of the day's activities for several students, while a ride on the bus starts the day for others. Before the first bell rings, students discuss several topics such as last night's homework, world and local affairs, and the big date Saturday night. The teachers, too, take advantage of the time before classes in order to get last minute materials gathered and a chance to chat before the day's work begins.

Students work hard in school to prepare themselves for the future. For students who are uncertain as to what their future plans may be, any faculty member is willing to give help and advice.

Working together, students and faculty members make the school what it is.

All of Jackson Township's students are extremely proud of the fine and dignified leadership offered by our principal, Mr. Ehlers.

Mrs. Corll is seen counting the money collected for lunches—one of the many duties she performs as school secretary.

Administration Focuses

The center of all activity at Jackson Township School is the office of the administration. Although the main governing duties of all Huntington Community Schools are given to Superintendent Foote and the School Board, the burden of directing Jackson Township School specifically rests on the shoulders of our very capable principal, Mr. Ehlers. The many duties of Mr. Ehlers range from handling disciplinary problems to directing the school's curriculum and promoting harmonious relationships between school and community. Mr. Ehlers' number one lieutenant in handling these duties is Mrs. Corll, school secretary. She performs varied assignments which range from writing passes for tardy students to handling the school's many monetary accounts. With her well-known trademark, a cheery smile and high spirits, she adds a note of gaiety and pleasantness to school life. These people working together help to provide Jackson Township School with its greatest assets—smooth operation and high quality.

This was the final year of teaching for one of Jackson Township's most beloved teachers, Mrs. Arline Wiedenhoeft. We wish to take this opportunity to thank her for her competent teaching, patient explanations, personal encouragement, guidance, and inspiration. She has been appreciated in her nine years at Jackson Township School, and will be missed by students and faculty alike. As she retires, she plans to enjoy her favorite hobby, nature study, and to spend more time at the family's lake resort in Michigan. We wish her much happiness now and always.

Attention On Education of Youth of Roanoke

With the present school reorganization plan Jackson Township School is governed by a superintendent and school board. The members of this governing body are (front row): Mr. John, Mr.

Weaver, Mr. Heiney, Mr. Miller. (Back row) Superintendent Foote, Mr. Marx, Mr. Wamsley, and Mr. Helvie.

Capable Assistants Provide Invaluable Services

A sparkling clean school building is the result of the efforts of Mrs. Dorothy McFarland and Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Gundy.

Those taken for granted most are the people charged with the responsibility of transporting us, feeding us, and keeping the school clean. These unsung heroes work behind the scenes to make our school a better place. The bus drivers see that rural students are transported to and from school safely, the school cooks prepare the warm, filling lunches that are enjoyed by students at noon, and the night janitors are responsible for the clean, neat building which we enter every morning.

Mrs. Jackson, Mrs. May, Mrs. Crow, and Mrs. Jordan prepare hamburgers for one of the many delicious lunches we enjoy.

With safety as their primary purpose the bus drivers transport students to school, basketball games, and other functions. The six men responsible for this service are Bob Winters, Art Young, Claude Tribolet, Dale Lahr, Bob Husband, and Ed Quickery.

Senior class officers are Ellen Simon, treasurer; Roger Colclessor, vice-president; Donna Rollins, secretary; and Eric Forst, president.

1965 Roanoke High School Graduating Class

The end of twelve short eventful, fun-filled years was reached in late May for the 1965 Roanoke High School Senior Class. It was the end of an experience which will always linger in the minds of those who took part.

After plodding through six years of grade school, they found junior high somewhat different—no recess and more work. They sped through two years of junior high and dived head first into their freshman year of high school. They began making money and having more parties. They broke fish fry, magazine, and concession sales records and roared into the big senior year. The final year sped by entirely too rapidly and at last it ended. Baccalaureate, Commencement and the senior trip came—the culmination of twelve unforgettable years.

It's fantastic! You'd be surprised what those hard working juniors accomplished this year. They sold magazine subscriptions, Christmas cards, and concessions at the home ball games and the Junior High Tourney. They also made their first dramatic effort with the presentation of the Junior Play. As springtime rolled around, they were hosts of the Junior-Senior reception. With this they closed an enterprising and fruitful year and looked eagerly forward to their senior year.

Sophomores Reach Mid Point

"The Class of '67" swung into their second lap at R.H.S. last fall, smashing all records in a tremendously successful fish fry during October. The first class party was held at the Allen County Memorial Coliseum, where the class enjoyed the high-speed thrills of professional ice hockey. Several sophomores were elected band officers, and the whole class was proud of the Stonewall "B" team, composed chiefly of sophomores. With the feeling that they had finally arrived, but with eyes on the future, sophomores ordered their class rings.

Freshmen Look Forward With Enthusiasm

The freshmen have completed their first year of high school and are looking forward to their sophomore year, when they will no longer be classified as "greenies."

Their big project last fall was the Freshman Skating Party. They broke the sales record of all previous classes and the money which they earned will go toward their senior trip.

Area Businesses Demonstrate Interest in R. H. S.

The area businessmen have done a great deal to make it possible for this year's book to be published. Without their aid it would have been impossible to compile such a book.

These businesses, supported by students, support our school. They provide for our needs in every situation, and their friendly personnel make business a pleasure. The Saxmuri Staff wishes to take this opportunity to offer their deepest appreciation to all those contributors listed on the following pages.

Senior girls, Donna Rollins, Cindy Hortley, Linda Lesh, Janet Simmons, and Linda Winger enjoy the ride being given them by Don Rice in a truck from W-W GRAVEL COMPANY where the finest aggregate products may be purchased.

Don Hines, Don Rice, Janet Simmons, Linda Lesh, Donna Rollins, Jerry Willett, Linda Winger, and Cindy Hartley flash contented smiles after finishing a delicious meal at the ELLISVILLE RESTAURANT.

Four jolly seniors pile into Charlene Jennings' car to head for PENGUIN POINT DRIVE-IN and some of those "Fabulous Fad" hamburgers.

Seniors Lynn Battershell, Bill Brindle, and Geoff Farrell, demonstrate their strength as they carry boxes delivered by ORR TRUCKING CO.

Ellen Jo Merckx and Jay Simmers discuss the powerful engine in this "lively one" from J. E. ZENT & SONS FORD SALES in Roanoke.

Charmaine Blanchard, Tom Platt, and Karen Keefer are seen trading pictures taken by the official school photographer, LAWRENCE-KREHE STUDIO of Marion and Huntington.

Steve Ness and Roger Colclessor proudly load ground feed at the ROANOKE ELEVATOR CO. where all of the finest farm products may be purchased.

Hungry sophomores, Steve McClure, Rich Bonner, and Dave Rit-enour rush from school to the POLAR BEAR DRIVE-IN in Huntington.

Jim Patten and Tom Coe admire some of the many tools available along with other quality items at the ROANOKE HARDWARE.

Greg Patten and Bob Denton enjoy friendly conversation and expert haircuts from Tom and Rex at the SERVICE BARBER SHOP.

Cheerfulness, friendliness, and cordiality, as well as good food are enjoyed by Eric Forst and Sam Wirts at the ROANOKE TRUCK STOP on U.S. 24.
